THE HOUSE [illegible]

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The republicans scored a good point in the election fight to-day by holding the democrats on the question of a [illegible] debate on the [illegible] Calkins [illegible] was very [illegible] and [illegible] democrats [illegible] for [illegible] Calkins is [illegible] an excellent record for himself, showing great ability and excellent self control, and is spoken of as the coming man for speaker of the next house. [illegible] who has been working with the democrats to-day voted with the republicans and it is understood he will do so in the future filibustering. On the motion to adjourn 148 voted no and one yea, showing the republicans have a quorum. Muldrow, of Mississippi, who had voted with the republicans for the purpose of having the right to move to reconsider, made a motion to that effect and demanded yeas and nays. Filibustering continued.

HOUSE PROCEEDINGS.

The request of the senate for the return of the five per cent. bond bill was acceded to.

Calkins rose to a question of personal privilege and sent to the clerk's desk and had read that portion of a letter written by [illegible] to the morning papers which charges the committee on elections [illegible] of forgery [illegible] the committee. Calkins said when a member of congress made the charge it was a reflection on every member of the committee. He vindicated the committee [illegible] and the [illegible] demanded that [illegible] the debate [illegible] objected.

There was some excitement but when it was announced that Walker was suffering simply from a slight attack of vertigo Kenna of West Virginia moved that when the house adjourned it be to meet on Saturday.

Randall moved to amend by substituting Friday. On this vote the republicans lost their quorum, the result being yeas 1, nays 140, and a call of the house was ordered. Walker recovered in time to answer his name on the call. Matters remained in statu quo for an hour and a half. The sergeant at arms was not dispatched after absent members and those present killed time in conversation and reading till 5, when Calkins stated he would call up the election case to-morrow and advising members to bring five days rations with them moved to adjourn.

The Grant Smelter Destroyed

Special to the [illegible] SPRINGS GAZETTE

LEADVILLE, May 25.—At 12:15 this morning an explosion occurred at the Grant smelting works, one of the immense furnaces. The entire smelter, including ore bins, coal and coke sheds, are a total loss. Six hundred men are out of work. No one was injured. The new paid fire department were unable to do anything to stay the flames.

Denver Dots

DENVER, May 24.—Small robberies, burglaries, etc., continue to be reported in unusual numbers. Several arrests have been made.

The case of Hattenbach vs. Torre et al, involving title to property in Leadville, was decided in favor of plaintiff by Judge Hallett in the United States circuit court to-day. Four [illegible] of the same character are set for [illegible] and [illegible] Monday.

Marshall's Platform

PITTSBURG, May 24.—Hon. Thos. Marshall in an interview said that he would not attend the independent convention which assembles in Philadelphia to-morrow. He had intended being present, but business would prevent him. He did not desire the office and would not accept the independent nomination if tendered him. He supports General Beaver for governor but cannot support Bowie for supreme judge.

PITTSBURG, May 24.—Thos. M. Marshall to-night made public his letter of declination of the nomination for congress-at-large. It is in answer to a letter from Geo. [illegible] the chairman of the committee, which letter precedes Mr. Marshall's answer. Mr. Marshall says:

"I would have given me much pleasure to [illegible] the proposition that public [illegible] administered with the same [illegible] purpose should [illegible] It is a mockery of common [illegible] sense to displace faithful and tried public servants in order to secure a place for hungry applicants, who may pass as worth [illegible] No sane man so [illegible] his private affairs and it is equally [illegible] to sound economy in the administration of public affairs. The use of public patronage to control or affect the people in the choice of a candidate for office is a grave political crime. It subverts the principles of representative government and tends to the debasement of the people. To have aided in some degree in calling attention to these questions of the hour would have been my duty as a nominee. The great moral and political ideas which called the republican party into existence have become embodied in the organic law of the land. If the mission of the present party organization is to go forward in the spirit of the platform it should succeed. If it fails to come up to the full measure of its promise it [illegible] Many party obligations rest very lightly on my shoulders, the call on me for party service was a genuine surprise and not to be [illegible] in a life time. It came and should be declined even without command [illegible] and private duties in which the public [illegible] demand all my energy to be devoted to their fulfillment, therefore I must [illegible]

The Greenbackers Address

ST. LOUIS, May 24.—The committee appointed by the greenback convention yesterday [illegible] a late hour and then [illegible] an address to the [illegible] bank [illegible] and monopolies [illegible] republican and democratic parties with bad legislation and extension of bank charters, declared against national banks, high railroad fare and telegraph tolls, in favor of land to actual settlers for greenbacks [illegible] in the interest of the [illegible] for the right of labor to combine, for payment of the national debt and against refunding it, for equal right for all special privileges for none, and ends by calling on all industrial organizations to join them.

The greenbackers this morning held an excited session and adjourned sine die. The chairman is to call the national committee to fix the details for a national convention. Also a petition was adopted requesting the president to veto the bill rechartering national banks.

New Railroad Scheme

CHICAGO, May 24.—The officers of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe railway company, operating five hundred miles in Texas, are here conferring with Chicago and Alton railroad officials and have submitted a proposal to extend their line from Kansas City to the northern boundary of Indian Territory; that the G., C. & S. F. extend its line from Ft. Worth to the southern boundary of the [illegible] company and build a line across the territory one hundred miles west of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, each road to bear half of the expenses, the Gulf road to [illegible] $400,000 yearly over the Alton. The latter gave very little encouragement to the plan.

Result of the Derby

LONDON, May 24.—The Derby was won by Shotover, Quick second, and Lorillard's Sachem third. Bruce, the favorite, came in fourth. The betting against Sachem at the start was eight to one. Shotover's time was 2:45¾.

The Second Overflow

LITTLE ROCK, May 24.—General Mangum, state agent for distribution of supplies on the Arkansas side of the Mississippi river during the late overflow, writes Governor Churchill that the second overflow is nearly as disastrous as the first. He says more than three-fourths of the tillage bottom land of Phillips county is now under water, with no prospect of being out before the 1st of June. His information of Desha is about the same, also a portion of Lee, Monroe and Crittenden counties. Suffering with the laborers in those counties will be greater than ever known. They are nearly all negroes, with nothing and no means of obtaining the absolute necessities of life. No planter will advance for them, as all hopes of making a crop are gone. They are willing to work, but there is no work for them, as planters affected by water will have all the labor they want. He concludes: "If the general government will rebuild levees it once negroes can get work [illegible] so they can support themselves and families. If the government don't feed them till they can get work I fear many will starve. The condition of people now under water is alarming. I don't know what can be done for them except through the general government. Intercede for them and do what you can for them."

Divided Among Themselves

LONDON, May 24.—All the papers comment upon the significant divergence among Irish members in the discussion last evening in the house of commons on the Gladstone motion. Besides O'Donnell and Arthur O'Connor, those refusing to follow Parnell included Thomas Power, O'Connor, Redmond, Finnegan, Richard Power, Sexton, McCarthy, Biggar, O'Sullivan, Moore, Healy, Sullivan, Leaming, Col. [illegible] Shiel. The following abstained with Parnell from voting on the division: O'Kelly, Collins, Sinnan, Molloy and Marum.

ANTI-BOSSISM.

Proceedings of the Independent Republican Convention.

A Vigorous Revolt from Don Cameron's Control.

The Ticket Nominated and Speeches Made.

PENNSYLVANIA CONVENTION.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—Probably two thirds of the delegates to the independent republican convention are present. Chairman McKee says he has letters and telegrams from which he gathers the information that all other delegates will be on hand to the morning and the convention will be full. The Philadelphia delegates were in session to-day about three hours. They decided not to vote as a delegation but leave each individual to act according to his own judgment on all questions, some placing Judge Ludlow (dem.) on the ticket for supreme judge, but a large majority are likely to support Major Merrick of Tioga for governor and Col. Wm. McMichael for congressman at large. The announcement of Marshall's withdrawal from the regular ticket gives great satisfaction to delegates from all parts of the state though many are disappointed because the terms of the letter preclude independents giving him a place on the ticket.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—George Lear, who presided at the regular republican convention, occupied a seat on the platform when the independent republican convention was called to order. Prayer was offered by the Rev. D. C. Babcock, the noted prohibitionist and secretary of the Pennsylvania state temperance association. United States Senator Mitchell was chosen temporary chairman by acclamation amidst cheers and applause. Mitchell returned thanks for the honor conferred on him and said the work of the convention was not to nominate a ticket that would help the democrats or defeat the republicans, but to nominate one that would receive the respect and support of republicans. [Applause.] This country has been founded upon principles which secured equal rights to all, and on the spot where these principles were declared the republican party was founded and he trusted that the atmosphere of this state would be found too free to be breathed by any republican willing to be the slave politically or otherwise of any man. [Applause.] There must in the order of things be leaders, but not bosses. It would be well for the convention to declare against this system and against bossism and machinism not only declare against them but provide a remedy that would tear them up. [Applause.] The only effective remedy will be found in the civil service system. [Applause.] The speaker would like to be able to stand before the convention and declare that it has the support of the administration, that the president was disposed to enforce this system but he was sorry to say there was yet no indication of such determination on the president's part. With power to appoint to places of minor importance taken out of the hands of politicians and made on the basis of fitness alone there would be fewer leaders ready to take the bread from the children of some poor but capable man to give his place to some mere politician. Senator Mitchell said he spoke with sorrow when he asserted what had been achieved at Chicago had not been borne out by the present administration. He trusted the republicans present were assembled to show what they could do to build up the [illegible] party, to protest against the method by which it had been managed and say to the people of this country that the voice of this body, actuated by a desire for the good of the republican party, is that the party shall rid itself of the barnacles and all the corruption by which she has been surrounded.

The roll of delegates was called. When the name of Charles S. Wolfe was called it elicited cordial and protracted applause. Senator Mitchell requested Wolfe to come forward. Wolfe in response arose in his place and after bowing to the chairman and convention said:

"Mr. President and gentlemen of the convention: I am here." [Renewed applause.]

Dr. Dowe, who was also called upon when his name was announced, said: "Gentlemen, I am here to resolve that we will put our grand old party where the immortal Lincoln found it and the immortal Garfield left it."

Chas. S. Wolfe was chosen permanent chairman of the organization and Senator Stewart chairman on resolutions. H. C. Foster was made permanent chairman with one vice president from each senatorial district. During the course of Foster's remarks he asserted that the death of President Garfield was chargeable directly to the Spoils system and spoke of the political power of the state as something that had been too long regarded as a sort of patrimony to be handed down from father to son.

The committee on rules reported the platform, which was frequently applauded, especially the anti-stalwart planks. It was adopted.

Major Merrick nominated for governor, Chief Justice Agnew. Dr. Dowe nominated Jas. S. Stewart. Wayne McVeagh's name was proposed but withdrawn, as it was held he would not accept.

The convention nominated Senator Stewart for governor. Agnew's name was withdrawn.

Following is the remainder of the ticket: For lieutenant governor, Levi Bird Duff of Allegheny; secretary of internal affairs, Major Merrick of Tioga; [illegible] at large, Col. Wm. McMichael; for judge of the supreme court, Geo. [illegible] Junkin.

Senator Stewart, nominee for governor, being called upon, said he accepted the nomination. The government in which [illegible] to [illegible] were [illegible] what its [illegible] termed it [illegible] was an honest movement in a [illegible] way for public [illegible] and public opinion [illegible] Philadelphia was the place to inaugurate it. We want party [illegible] The honest conviction of the republicans of Pennsylvania have not found expression in any [illegible] than [illegible] control of the [illegible] They tell us this movement will imperil the life of the republican party. I do not believe it. The republican party was in [illegible] Speaking for myself I would say if that noble party must die I had rather see [illegible] glorious by struggle [illegible] her exit in the [illegible]

The resolutions call upon the legislature to submit to [illegible] amendment to the state constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors within the state [illegible] majority.

Col. Duff of Pittsburg, nominee for lieutenant governor, said he would accept. He regarded the convention as the [illegible] of the [illegible] Its [illegible] in giving the minority the [illegible] and the accident of [illegible] death [illegible] majority had obtained [illegible] government and that faction is using [illegible] for its own purposes. The speaker intended to stay with the party and had no doubt which is the party. Merrick, Wolfe and Mapes followed. Adjourned sine die.

A few evenings ago a number of Mexicans with their families encamped near Goose ranch. The American laborers being drunk attempted to force the Mexicans to give up their women. The result will be the closing of all the mills in this vicinity.

HENDRICKS ALIAS HARDING.

One of the Burglars Arrested Found to be an Old Offender.

Sheriff Dunn when he opened the county jail on Tuesday night to admit the two prisoners brought from Denver did not recognize in one of them the person of John Hendricks, an old offender and one on whom he had turned the prison bolts repeatedly before. Yesterday when he passed through the corridor to give the prisoners their breakfast the first man to step from his cell to the cage was Jack Hendricks and not until then did he realize that he had in his custody a man who would bear the closest watching.

Hendricks, or as he now calls himself, Harding, was on the 2d of April, 1881, sentenced by Judge Helm to one year in the penitentiary for grand larceny. He served his sentence and was released on the 23d of March, having been allowed one month for good behavior. Rather an amusing story in relation to Hendricks' sentence will bear repeating. When he was first brought into court for trial he plead not guilty to the charge of grand larceny and his trial was set for the following day. As it was the evidence against him was very light and the chances were favorable for his acquittal. During the afternoon of the day previous to the one set for his trial an incident occurred which materially changed the condition of things and somewhat lessened his chances of acquittal.

He was standing in the cage talking to Sheriff Dunn when he noticed on his finger a small onyx ring. Says Hendricks: "That ring is exactly like one I used to have. Where did you get it?"

Mr. Dunn replied that he had purchased it in a second hand store and that it had been pawned there by a man whose name he mentioned.

"Now I know it is mine," said Hendricks, "for that is the very name I gave when I took it there."

This acknowledgement on the part of Hendricks was the most conclusive evidence that they had against him in the case pending against him in the district court, the result of which was that when he appeared in the court room the following morning he plead guilty to the charge of grand larceny instead of standing trial.

Judge Helm in pronouncing sentence upon him spoke of his youthful appearance and said that he would be as lenient with him as possible on account of it being his first offense. He then sentenced him to one year at hard labor in the state prison. Not until some time afterward did the judge learn that Hendricks was the selfsame person whom he a few weeks previous sentenced to confinement in the state prison for the same crime at Leadville and who escaped from the county jail there before he was taken to the penitentiary.

It will be remembered that a little over a year ago Sheriff Dana discovered that one of the inch-and a half iron bars separating the cells from the corridor in the county jail had been sawed off, and a scheme to release several of the prisoners was revealed. It was afterward learned that Hendricks was the man who had done the work.

There now seems to be no doubt that the authorities have captured the right man. The watch and ring recovered by Mayor Robbins have been identified by Mr. Charles Dunkee as the property taken from his house last week. The preliminary examination of Hendricks alias Harding and O'Brien, will take place to-day and the pawn broker to whom they pawned the jewelry in Denver, has been summoned as a witness against them.

This week's Muldoon contains interesting matter for Secretary Teller to read

The Solid Muldoon advertises the Abble Consolidated Mining Co's as a fraud

Marshall's letter takes so high a view of the responsibilities of office that it is to be regretted that he is not in a high position of trust

President Arthur won't enjoy reading the proceedings of the Pennsylvania independent convention. Some very honest and disagreeable criticisms were made on his administration

On the tenth of October last President Arthur stated he should endeavor to carry out President Garfield's policy. He has succeeded in this time in estranging nearly all Garfield's friends and overturned all the good Garfield did

After the first astonishment following the assassination of Cavendish and Burke, the landlords began evicting those in arrears of rent. In Galway alone 500 farmers were evicted within a week. It is now admitted by both parties that it is unjust to evict for those in arrears in rent yet the landlords are now busy at this work. It is not likely there will be any improvement in the bearing of the Irish peasants for sometime to come with such treatment

The bolt in Pennsylvania promises to be of much more importance than at first thought. We print the proceedings of the convention elsewhere. The candidates nominated do not enjoy a very extended reputation but probably have great local strength. From present appearances the independent, anti-stalwart elements are likely to be arrayed very solidly against Cameron and this is sufficient to defeat Beaver. It is impossible now to compromise and the fight will go on bitterly

The idea of the Chronicle that the independent party is fighting Cameron simply to get office is not bourne out by the facts. Mr Garrett might have been the nominee for governor had it not been for his devotion to reform ideas. He is president of the committee of one hundred in Philadelphia which is the great political power of that city. He declined because he did not think a man in his position could accept an office without injuring his usefulness in the reform movement. Marshall declined to take any office on almost similar grounds. It is very noticeable that none of the leaders in this bolt are nominated for office. This leaves them free to work and relieves them of the charge that they were actuated by selfish purposes

In our dispatches will be found the letter of declination of Thomas M Marshall regular republican nominee for congressman at large in Pennsylvania. The reasons for his declination are given in a plain, forcible manner which will carry conviction to the minds of most readers. He bases his declination on the "boss" idea which the success of Cameron this fall would strengthen. It is a great blow at the ticket because he was considered one of its strongest features. It was supposed that Marshall would accept and thus the independents would be conciliated. The nomination of Marshall was one of the most remarkable incidents of the late regular republican state convention. Cameron had carried his points with great success up to the nomination of the candidate for congressman at large. He had arranged to have Butler the present state treasurer nominated, but by one of those strange freaks in a political convention, he was not. Butler has two more years as state treasurer and his nomination for congressman at large was to make a vacancy in his present office which Quay was to fill. Up to this time Cameron had had a large majority for all his candidates. When nominations for congressman at large were called for Butler was nominated and also Marshall. Marshall, who appeared in the convention as an anti-Cameron delegate, immediately arose and declined to have his name used. But in spite of this he was nominated by two-thirds of the convention amid the greatest enthusiasm. It was a remarkable tribute to the man and showed that Cameron did not have the absolute control he is credited with. While the nomination was a surprise to every one, it was considered a rare stroke of good luck. Beaver, who feared the Independent movement, thought this nomination effectually headed it off and declared that, "This is from God, it is the work of Divine Providence." But his declination and the strong letter he wrote loses the regular ticket more than it made. Coming as it does at the time of the independent convention it must have a very depressing effect on the stalwart republicans. Monday morning the Cincinnati Commercial printed an interview with Marshall. A part of this bears on his relations to Cameron and is of unusual interest and we therefore reprint it

I am going down myself to the independent convention this week at Philadelphia. I don't know Wolfe, but I am sure you can not run a campaign on grievances, and here I may say that the independents need shrewd leaders. They should go to the people with the single question: Why should Don Cameron sit in Washington and dictate who shall be our congressmen, judges and legislators. I am told that Cameron and his minions claim to have nominated me. It is all false. The Camerons don't like me. At the convention in 1860 I spoke against the nomination of Simon Cameron for the presidency for two hours, and I said

"Gentlemen, I beg you to remember that you are about to name a man not for a war legislature but for president of the United States. I beg you to remember that this high office has been held by Washington, Jefferson, Madison and a long line of illustrious men. Do you want such a man as Simon Cameron to occupy the seat honored by Washington? Shall you say that Jefferson's mantle shall fall on such shoulders as these?"

That was the time that I said," continued Marshall, "I can go through a dark alley at night and the first man I caught would make a better president than Simon Cameron. I have had people related to Don Cameron come to me since the nomination and say that I should beware of him, that he would knife me when the proper time arrived. He does not want me in Washington and I am not anxious to go"

Solitude for Great Men

London Speculator

Doubtless during the long voyage his mind continued to brood over the scenes of desolation and death which more powerful than others, suggested to him the clue of his subsequent discovery. And if there was seclusion enough on that voyage to preoccupy completely Mr Darwin's scientific imagination with that great problem and haunt him with the scenes which most vividly suggested it, there was seclusion enough to give birth to the great ideas which the quiet life at Down enabled him to develop. It was just the same with the great thinker whom Mr Froude commemorated for us. But for the life at Craigenputtoch "Sartor Resartus" could never have been written nor, indeed would the general conception of "the French Revolution" ever been thought out. It was in the dreams and reveries of that wild moorland that Carlyle's genius was matured. Again, what poet has had so great an influence over the minds of those whom he has influenced at all as Wordsworth? And does not the influence of Wordsworth date from that great Hegira when "it came to pass," as Mr. Bagehot puts it that William Wordsworth went up the hills," there to meditate freely on those few but living thoughts and images which made his poems live for ever in the hearts of his disciples. Take the case of another man of probably greater spiritual influence than any of the three we have as yet named Cardinal Newman. He himself tells us how one of the great Oxford authorities Bishop Coplestone, if we remember rightly—saluted him, in one of his habitually lonely walks at Oxford, with the sentence "Never less alone than when alone," and he himself also tells us how his long musings in the lonely fishing boats of the Mediterranean, and in sickness among strangers in Sicily, blew up into living flame the smothered fire of his slow lit genius

"SALUTING INFANT ROYALTY"

What Happens in Berlin when the Crown Prince's Baby Goes out of Doors

San Francisco Chronicle —

At the guard houses there is considerable fuss made whenever any royalty passes that way. It is the duty, and the only duty of the sentry on guard, to keep his eye open for royalty. When he sees it—and he seems to have a remarkably long range of vision—he yells at the top of his by no means musical voice. The rest of the guard drop their cards and pipes, rush precipitately out, fall in, and present arms with drums beating. This sort of thing is gone through with every time any royalty passes. Even to the infant children of the crown prince receive the same homage. There is something strange in seeing a lot of grown men present arms to a year-old infant. But they do it every time the nurse of the Crown prince's family takes the children for an airing. But this "isn't a circumstance" to what, according to the story of one of the American colony, happened here once. The [illegible] little child of the crown prince out for a walk, and happened to pass one of the guard houses. The sentry on duty yelled, the guard turned out and presented arms, while drums beat. Just as the nurse and child got in front of the line of soldiers, the child espied a heap of nice, clean sand suitable for mud pies. The instinct of the child got the better of its training. It broke away from its nurse and began to play in the sand. The nurse protested, entreated, begged—but it was no use. The child was bound to indulge in a little plebian amusement. It had its own way, and played in the sand until it had satisfied its royal mind, and all this time the guard stood at a "present arms," while the drummer nearly wore his drumhead out.

Decorating a Hero in France

London Telegraph

A story comes from France which would delight the hearts of Colonel John Hay and Mr. Bret Harte. It is the tale of a working man and his one moment of heroism so dramatic, so simple and so direct that if it were told by a master hand in prose or verse it would fairly stand side by side with the grim narrative of Jim Bludso of the Prairie Belle, the devotion and unspeakable tenderness of Mr John Oakhurst, or the pathetic faith of Tennessee's partner. M Grisel the newest candidate for the decoration of the Legion of Honor, is a workingman of the same stamp. All his life, it may be said of him, "he'd seen his duty, a dead sure thing, and went for it there and then," but his special opportunity came one dark, dismal night in the winter of 1857. At that time the man in whose honor a grand banquet is to be given next week at the Elysee Montmartre, under the presidency of Victor Hugo was employed as an engine driver on one of the important lines of France. On the November night in question M Grisel was driving a train from Clermont to Brioude. A terrible storm was raging the floods were out, and all around the train was as dark as pitch. When the train stopped at a place called Vic le Comte the sharp ears of Grisel, the engine driver, caught the sound of the rushing torrent of the River Allier, and he remembered a very dangerous bridge which the train was bound to cross. It may have been instinct or a very proper sense of precaution, but the engine driver got it into his head that it would be running a tremendous risk to pass over with the train until the fabric had been examined and pronounced safe. He communicated his views to the station master, and was laughed at for his pains. In fact this official his superior officer, in the interest of his company and with a view, no doubt to expedition, ordered Grisel to proceed at once. The engine driver refused point blank, and by doing so at once qualified himself for instant dismissal. In such a case, ninety nine men out of every hundred would have taken the risk and said no more about it but Grisel was conscientious, and remained firm to his point, whereupon there followed a strange dilemma. The station master lost his temper and was proportionately as irritable as the working man was calm, but so obstinate was the engine-driver, that it became necessary to telegraph to the nearest important station for instructions. Long before the return message had been received the anticipated disaster was a fact, and the pitiless flood had carried away the bridge into the torrent below. Then followed the scene of great rejoicing. The passengers, awakened from their slumbers by the crash, got out of their carriages and when they learned to whose judgment, experience and tact they owed their lives they surrounded the young engineer, in order to congratulate him on having by his act of resolution risked dismissal from his employment, and been the means of saving at least one hundred and twenty five lives from a catastrophe as horrible as the Tay Bridge

The Czar's Widow

The Princess Dolgorouki inspires much interest in Paris. Before the czar, her husband was assassinated she inclined a little to embonpoint. Since that event took place she has recovered the slenderness of eighteen. The Princess Dolgorouki is touched, but not spoiled by grief. She seeks "distractions" but not restlessly

She is one of those women who would look the lady in a cotton dress and simple in brocade. Though her feet are small she wears a long dress which does not, however trail. A widow's coif, un peu a la religieuse, well covers over the shorn head, for when the czar was dead the princess had according to a Russian custom, her hair cut off, although a piece was not allowed for it in Alexander's coffin. Her complexion is still fresh and of the texture of a rose petal. The present czar has done nothing to deprive her of the fortune which his late father left her. She has a large retinue with her. The English governess goes out with her and the three children to the Bois. The princess is used to being stared at, and bears with calmness being mobbed

It is not her present intention ever to go back to Russia. She is afraid the nihilists, or a group of them, might lay hold of her son and proclaim him national emperor in opposition to the German one, who is now afraid to stir out of Gatschina. The boy resembles both Alexander II and Nicholas, but his eyes are not so staring as theirs were. He is neither plain or handsome, but is remarkable. One sees that puzzling ideas and reflections have been turned over in his young brain, and that he has a painful consciousness of his false position. The girls are fresh, fair little things, and the youngest knows nothing more about the tragedy of March 13 than that it is the cause of her doll being in mourning. The whole party, dogs and all, are sumptuously lodged. One of the animals was the daily companion of the czar in his walks, and slept at the side of his bed

A. M. 10.—Examination of candidates for admission.

The following in regard to the college's first graduates may be of interest:

Parker Sedgewick Halleck was born in Palmyra, Wisconsin. He attended school at that place, but when about fifteen years of age before finishing the high school course moved to Illinois. After graduating from the normal department of the Elgin academy, of Elgin, Illinois, he taught school awhile and then entered the preparatory department of Wabash college, an Indiana institution. By doing double work he finished the preparatory course in one year. In August, 1878, Mr. Halleck was married to Miss Lavinia Platt, daughter of Rev. Joseph Platt, of Kansas City. Two boys have been born to them who can have the somewhat unusual experience of seeing their father graduate. Immediately after marriage Mr. and Mrs. Halleck came to Colorado, and he entered Colorado College in the fall of 1878. Since that time he has taught school one year at Colorado City and has also taught two terms in the preparatory department of the college. Last May he graduated from the assaying department of the college and has since been Professor Strieby's assistant. Mr. Halleck has been connected with the Phi Delta Pi society. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and a republican.

Frederick Wells Tuckerman was born in Providence, Rhode Island. When quite young he removed to Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, Massachusetts, where he received all his education except what he has obtained here. He learned the printer's trade at Ashland, Massachusetts. When in 1876 Mr. Tenney, who was then pastor of the Ashland church, came here to assume charge of the college, he brought Mr. Tuckerman with him. Beginning in the autumn of 1876 Mr. Tuckerman taught in college every term until the end of the autumn of 1880. For a time he and Professor Sheldon were the college's only teachers. The first two years spent here were used in preparation, and he accordingly entered college in 1878. He has been President Tenney's private secretary and has done considerable work outside of college. After graduation he expects to become a Congregational minister, and will probably take the course of some seminary in the east. Mr. Tuckerman has been connected with both the Phi Delta Pi society and has taken part in the publishing of both college papers, the Occident and the Occidental Mirror. Like Mr. Halleck, he is a republican.

The Occidental club succeeded in having a quorum last Friday evening. Eliza Smith, Harry Johnson and Rolland Hull were elected regular members. The resignation of Mr. Flynn as local editor and business manager was accepted. It was decided to leave vacant the position of local editor and E. H. Turner was elected business manager. A committee was appointed to arrange for a society picnic. A motion suspending the by-laws so that seven members shall constitute a quorum next September was presented. The object of this is to allow the continuance of the society. Some members are not likely to be here and others are tired of the society and expect to cease active membership. The last meeting of the year, to which the public is invited, will be held next Friday evening. The following is the programme:

Instrumental music	Jennie Marden
Essay	F. L. Cooper
Reading	Belle Olter
Oration	E. H. Turner
Vocal solo	Julia Moseer
Story	Jessie M. Rowe
Recitation	Lizzie Doak
Declamation	C. B. Seldomridge
Debate—Resolved—That Gladstone's latest policy in relation to Ireland was not for the benefit of England.
Affirmative	Mary Neal
Negative	F. W. Tuckerman
Critic	T. S. Wilson

The final meeting of the College Union will be held at the residence of Miss Shattuck next Saturday evening. A full attendance is desired.

Notwithstanding bad weather there was a geologic excursion last Saturday. Those who went got cold and wet, but had "a splendid time." A geologic and botanic excursion to Bear Creek cañon will take place next Saturday, weather permitting.

There was a very small picnic at the college building on Friday.

About fifty persons attended Professor Sheldon's lecture last Tuesday evening. The next lecture, the last of the course, will be given next Tuesday evening and will be about the interior of the Parthenon, the statue of Athene Parthenos, and the temple of Erectheus.

CAVE OF THE WINDS!

Now Open for the Season Of 1882,

Is located in William's Canon, one mile north from the Mineral Springs in Manitou.

There is no more pleasing or grand sight in Colorado and you miss a wonderful scene if you fail to see it.

There are large stalactites and grand old stalagmites with the most delicate and beautiful flowers. The sight of one room and grotto of the flower of alabaster is worth infinitely more than the expense and trouble of visiting the cave.

There are many rooms for you to visit, among which are Cascade, Canopy, Cathedral and Music Halls, Alabaster Grotto and the famous Bridal Chamber.

The air is pure and there is no water to injure or soil clothing. Wraps and lights furnished and attentive guides. Come and see us.

Like Micawber, have been waiting for something to turn up. Now as it has turned they, like true merchants, propose to give their patrons the advantage of their long experience in purchasing goods cheap. I have all the new goods that my competitors are advertising to sell at cost or discount 33⅓ per cent. on marked prices. The old dodge selling at cost is played out; no merchant is going to sell a new stock of goods at the opening of the season at cost, and the merchant who can sell goods at 33⅓ per cent. discount either had them marked too high in the first place or marked them up for the occasion. I am not excited because Weatherby or Monk & Ingalsbe are closing out but am glad to see it as we have too many dry goods stores here and wish them success whilst they are doing it. I expect to pursue the even tenor of my way, not sell goods at cost unless they are damaged, nor at a discount of 33⅓ per cent., but will sell them as cheap if not cheaper than my competitors who try to gull the trade by such flaming ads. Come and see for yourself before buying.

James Johnson was fined $100 and costs yesterday by Justice Pixley for vagrancy.

Alderman Brown went to Denver Tuesday afternoon via the Denver & New Orleans.

Mr. William Curtiss was married on Tuesday night to Miss Mary A. Graham, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mrs. Captain L. B. Yerger lost one of her youngest daughters, Mary Agnes, by diphtheria in Denver this week.

It is now definitely settled that Mr. Sommers will open the Manitou House some time between the 10th and 15th of June.

Prof. W. C. Whitford, president of Milton College, Wisconsin, has been visiting our city as a guest of one of his old students, Dr. Culver.

John J. Brown, a supposed lunatic, was arrested by the officers yesterday morning. It seems to be the opinion that he has escaped from the insane asylum at Pueblo.

H. D. Debella, agent of John Robinson's circus arrived in the city yesterday. He comes to make arrangements for the appearance of the circus here about the middle of June.

Reserved seats for the Lawrence Barrett matinee will begin this morning at 8 o'clock. The prices for the matinee are parquette $1.00, parquette circle 75 cents, balcony 50 and gallery 25 cents.

Mr. J. A. Robertson, of the Denver police force, was in the city yesterday accompanied by his wife. He is taking a brief vacation and selected Colorado Springs as the most suitable place to spend it in.

We received yesterday with the compliments of the Madison Square Theatre company, one of the handsome souvenirs distributed by them in the Madison Square Theatre, on the 200th performance of "Esmeralda."

—Manager Bush has written Mr. Nye that he is trying to make arrangements with the Comley Barton opera company to come to Colorado Springs, in which case our people will have an opportunity to see the opera of "Patience."

The ladies of the Baptist church will have a sociable this evening at the house of Mrs. Jordan, northeast corner of Pike's Peak and Wahsatch avenues. Ice cream and cake will be served. The friends of the church are invited to be present.

Charlotte Thompson has been booked for June 17th at the opera house. Miss Thompson appeared here last year and was well received. She is an exceedingly fascinating little actress and is playing this season under the management of Harry Kelley.

Mr. F. A. Mangold has purchased the interest of J. R. Robertson in the steam laundry and the name of the firm will in the future be Mangold & Easterly. They propose securing the services of a competent laundryman to take charge of the business.

A musical and literary entertainment will be given at the Methodist Episcopal church this evening at eight o'clock under the supervison of the Ladies' and Pastor's Christian Union. The best local talent has been engaged for the music and recitations. Some new features will be introduced. Admission 25 cents; children 15 cents.

It is very probable that the Colorado Springs horsemen will arrange for a running and trotting meeting here some time during either June or July. An effort is being made to this effect and it is to be hoped that they will succeed. Several of the state trotting and running stables are now here and will probably remain during the greater part of the summer.

Work on the foundation of the new Catholic church on the corner of Cascade avenue and Cucharas street was begun yesterday. The building will be much larger than the one now in use and will front on Cascade avenue instead of Cucharas street. Messrs. Bruso & Walsh have the contract for building the church as well as the parsonage on the rear of the lot, which is also in the course of erection.

Messrs. Brewster & Helm last night finished burning their first kiln of brick, numbering 150,000. Of this number 75,000 are pressed brick, the remainder hand made. Mr. W. F. Steinmitz, a practical brick maker, who personally superintends the work in the yard, seems confident that they will turn out brick of an excellent quality. Another kiln of 200,000 is now being built and will be ready for burning in a few days.

Mr. B. B. Taylor, one of the coroner's jury, who wrote to Mr. A. A. Mellier, the St. Louis druggist in reference to the prescription found in the pockets of the man found dead east of the city on Sunday, yesterday received a telegram from St. Louis saying that the prescription was identified as given to one J. A. Crowlay and that further particulars would be sent by mail. On Tuesday, March 21st, the day following the one on which the rebate check found in the man's pocket was given, a person presumed to be the same one registered at the Colorado Springs hotel as from Kansas City. He was provided with lodging one night and then left but returned the day following and remained a day and a half. Mr. Atherton remembers the man distinctly and recalls a conversation he had with him about ranching. The man wanted to get some outdoor work on a ranch on account of his lungs being affected. He asked Mr. Atherton which way he had better go to find a ranch. He was directed eastward. So far as can be learned he stopped nowhere else in the city and must have been on his way out when he met his death, probably from a hemorrhage brought on by over exertion.
